

HOLY CROSS: TRANSFORMS EXTERIOR

Hospital architecture and designs have transformed over time, from the once sterile white walls, bleak exteriors, and stark decor to vibrant colors and eye-catching materials on the interior and exterior. The elements in today's best designs have been proven to improve patient care. The exterior of a build is as important as the interior because it is the face that is presented to the public. H3Design in collaboration with Holy Cross determined the color scheme and layering best suited to the building.

PRODUCT SPOTLIGHT

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Many elements go into making a beautiful building inside and out. One of the greatest challenges in designing an exterior is the color palette. Through experience and education I am always updating my choices, how to approach a space, how to take into account the architecture and make it work in different ways with different colors. It is my responsibility as a designer to illustrate the importance of balance and contrasts that help to please the eye and transform a space.
